Unique Solutions for Unique Customers

- A policyholder was involved in a collision that nearly totaled his Ferrari Enzo – one of only 400 that were ever made. The extensive damage would require lengthy and complicated repairs. We offered to reimburse the policyholder for the full value of the vehicle, but due to its rarity he preferred that we attempt to repair it. The design intricacies made it nearly impossible to find a qualified technician and replacement parts in the area. We determined that the only technicians equipped to complete the repairs were the ones who originally built it — at the Ferrari manufacturer in Italy. We shipped the car, and the policyholder was flown to Italy twice to inspect the progress. Once all repairs were completed to the policyholder's satisfaction, the vehicle was shipped back to his residence — good as new!
- A policyholder in southern California was involved in an accident while driving his SUV. The vehicle came to rest at the bottom of a deep canyon in a restricted area comprised of rugged terrain and quicksand — making it impossible for a tow truck to reach. Because it was in a restricted area, the policyholder was warned that if the vehicle was not removed; he would incur significant fines. In addition, the policyholder needed to retrieve time-sensitive materials and valued personal items that were still in the vehicle. Our solution: we brought in a helicopter to sling-lift the SUV from the canyon. The materials were recovered and returned to the policyholder.
